To whom it may concern,

Botanical CloudSM is the common name for all the paid services that we provide using modified versions of the open source codebase on the eper.io GitLab project.

Botanical CloudSM is a paid service, and it relies on patents to charge a service fee that includes patent license and reliability assurances.

The user interface of Botanical CloudSM service should align with a casual use case. More people favor their cell phones for internet usage. This is not likely to change. Smart phone prices are still comparable with desktop pricing. Smart phones are personal "jewelery" and a matter of self positioning. Their price will reflect this for a long time that is leveraged by hardware companies such as Apple, and Samsung.

Small businesses desperately need smart phones, they may spare on further investment in bigger screen laptops or desktops. This will gradually change by screen prices dropping. We expect that our high bandwidth low engineering cost solutions will be a major driver of low cost large screen appliances.

Casual use can be interpreted as personal use for both business and private matters. It focuses less on team pages than focused content.

We suggest the following design principles as a result.

- All content should be ordered to the middle.
This shifts from the traditional approach to put trays and buttons to the edges. The usage is more straightforward and the eye is strained by less movement. Certified Botanical CloudSM devices may even get a personalized curved sticker to the edges, to enforce this policy.
- The primary launcher should be a two line text field to enter full sentences. The controller is text first to support the huge amount of generative artificial intelligence based logic.

- Suggested icons based on the text entered should appear above or below the main text box.
- We use the name applet instead of app for Botanical CloudSM certified services. This reflects the notion to be single paged rather than relying on paging or even worse scrolling. Scrolling strains the eye and leverages too much processor and battery power.
- Widgets are full page as a result respecting the edges to be free from content. Special widgets can just consume a quarter or one ninths of the screen, if they have such a purpose like message notifications or stock quotes.
- We embrace keyboards and mouse pointers to use your cell phone and tablet devices. iPhone and iPad apps are great to leverage as a personalized keyboard for all your devices at home. This includes your desktop, wallside, walltop, countertop, television, or home assistant. Personal phones are also great to initiate payments and to keep information private.
- Pointers are either the touchpad of a phone app or a hand captured by a well aligned camera. This allows to partner with existing vendors, and to gain new contributors.
- Your camera and microphone is ideally your cell phone. Botanical CloudSM certified displays may include a slot to secure your cell phone during your meetings. You likely invested a lot already in the best camera experience of your smart phone. Why would not you leverage your investment?
- Similarly your smart phone can be leveraged as your microphone, except if controller devices like the ones controlling meeting rooms have this purpose.
- Botanical CloudSM service is a no account service. You rely on prepaid cash deposits, and you use the allocated credits and tokens to pay for services. This makes it very easy for partners to ramp up and get paid for their intellectual property.
